

RECONNECTING POLITICS WITH PEOPLE

An evening with Arnie Graf and Danny Kruger

ARNIE GRAF has more than 50 years' experience of community organising. Based in Baltimore, Graf is a disciple of Saul Alinsky and mentored a young Barack Obama while both were involved in church-based community action. In 2011 Ed Miliband appointed him to his team of advisers with a special brief to conduct a root-and-branch review of the Labour Party and reconnect it with voters.

DANNY KRUGER is Chief Executive of the criminal justice charity Only Connect which helps prisoners, former criminals and young people at risk of reoffending. A former special adviser to David Cameron, Kruger was a leading advocate of the Big Society, 'compassionate Conservatism' and the need for the party to embrace social justice. He is a former chief leader writer at the Daily Telegraph.

Two of the most original thinkers on politics, power and faith, Graf and Kruger are associated with different political traditions, but both have been closely involved in the links between faith and political action. Both are often critical of the dominant models of politics, highlighting the importance of values and human relationships. Their conversation is likely to spark new thoughts about how change can be brought about.

The conversation will be moderated by ISABEL HARDMAN
assistant editor of The Spectator

Thursday 22 October, 6.30 – 8.00 pm

Stripe Auditorium
UNIVERSITY OF WINCHESTER

Admission £5.00

Including tea and coffee from 6.00 pm
and wine reception afterwards

Booking essential

To book your place please click here

Organised in partnership by:
TRIPL (The Centre for Theology and Religion in Public Life)
The Centre for English Identity and Politics
The Southern Policy Centre • Theos

Kindly supported by:

